

VRINGO SUBSIDIARY I/P ENGINE FILES LAWSUIT AGAINST MICROSOFT CORPORATION

January 31, 2013

I/P Engine Alleges Infringement Over Relevance Filtering Technology Patents

NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Jan. 31, 2013-- Vringo, Inc. (NYSE MKT: VRNG), a company engaged in the innovation, development and monetization of mobile technologies and intellectual property, today announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, I/P Engine, Inc., filed a patent infringement lawsuit against Microsoft Corporation in the Southern District of New York.

The lawsuit alleges infringement of U.S. Patent Nos. 6,314,420 and 6,775,664, entitled "Collaborative/Adaptive Search Engine" and "Information Filter System and Method for Integrated Content-Based and Collaborative/Adaptive Feedback Queries," respectively.

According to the complaint, I/P Engine is seeking a judgment declaring that Microsoft has and continues to infringe the patents-in-suit, and an award past and future compensatory damages amounting to no less than reasonable royalties, prejudgment interest and any other damages based on any form of recoverable economic injury.

I/P Engine is represented by Dickstein Shapiro LLP.

A copy of I/P Engine's complaint will available at www.vringoinc.com.
